PLAY RATE™
Ideation document

By Hristo Ganchev

My idea for a page or program is simple. It will be similar to IMDb (Internet Movie Database), the website where you can write reviews, rate and overall get information for movies. However, my website will be about video games instead.
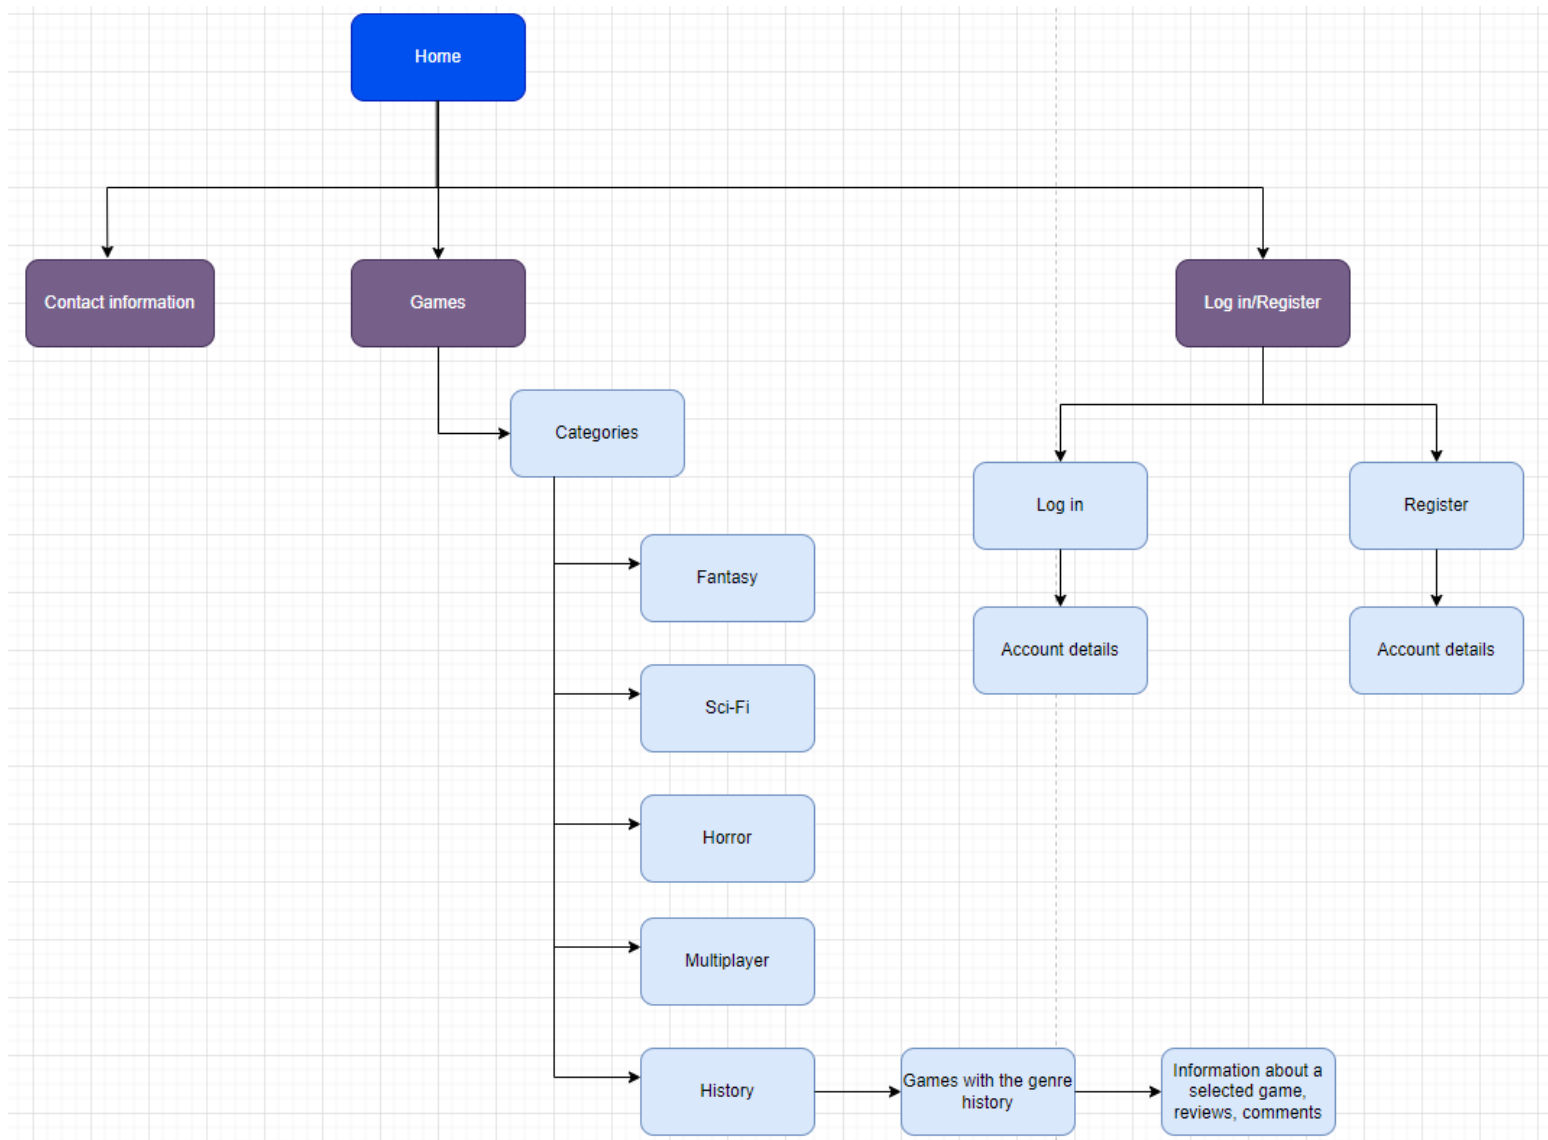

The name is PLAY RATE. The user will have the ability to do everything that they can like in IMDb. The information about the games will be retrieved from a database. The user can browse based on a specific name or genre they have set through a collection of video games. There, they can find a short backstory of the game, rating, comments from other users, etc.

The application is perfect for users who are unsure whether they would like to buy a specific game or not. There, they have the ability to see information which can help them make their decision.

The user can either create a registration or not. It is their choice. The only limitation is that if they do not create a registration, they can only observe, without being able to interact. They will not be able to write reviews or rate games.

Another specific thing about my project is that the user will not be able to buy video games from it. They can only see related information, reviews and comments.

Awful! I do not recommend this game at all! The plot is awful, the gameplay is awful, even the graphics are worse than they were before!
